Overview—Kōkua Kalihi Valley (KKV) began in 1972 as a multi-denominational community effort to address the unmet health needs of Kalihi Valley’s residents, a population of more than 25,000. Kalihi is often the first home for new immigrants and contains O‘ahu’s two largest public housing projects. The Community Health Center recently moved to a brand new facility and maintains satellite clinics providing outreach and youth services in public housing projects at Kūhiō Park Terrace, Kalihi Valley Homes, and Hauiki Hale.

Services—KKV provides a wide range of services including dental, medical, family planning, perinatal, mental health, youth recreation, outreach and social services, health education, STD and HIV screenings, and transportation. Translation services are available in 16 Asian and Pacific Island languages. KKV provides nutrition counseling through the WIC program and participates in professional education and training programs with the University of Hawai‘i

Schools of Medicine, Nursing, and Social Work. KKV organized the first Dental Residency program in Hawai'i through a partnership with Lutheran Medical Center and was recently chosen as one of 25 awardees nationwide to receive a 5-year Robert Wood Johnson Foundation – Active Living by Design Grant.

Special Populations/Health Issues—Immigrants (including migrants from the Freely Associated States). KKV treats the health conditions often seen in a new immigrant population: critical lack of dental care, poor nutrition, hypertension, exposure to hepatitis B, heart disease, and asthma. There are high rates of teenage pregnancy, drug and alcohol abuse, domestic violence and other mental health conditions, and inadequately immunized children.

Patient Profile for 2006—Ethnic groups served (top 3): Pacific Islander (48%), Asian (40%), Native Hawaiian (8%).
